Senate Resolution, That the Senate and Assembly hold evening sessions during the remainder of the session.

Mr. Bell held that it was an im- plication against the House that it had not been industrious.

He stated that there was never an Assembly under the sun that had accomplished more work during the same length of time than this As- sembly, and that the House should postpone the resolution indefinitely, and to show that the House meant business, to pass a resolution that the House hold evening sessions during the remainder of the session.

The House then took up the Con- stitutional Amendments. Amend- ments read first and second time and referred to Committee of the Whole.

Last Night's Play.

Hugo, the Hunchback of Florence was splendidly rendered.

An incident of the play was the throwing out of a man who inter- rupted the performance.

Mr. Foote made a talk to the audi- ence in which he said he proposed to run the Opera House this week for the benefit of the quiet, drama loving element and that hoodlumism and ruffianism of all grades would be suppressed.

His speech was greeted with ap- plause and was well timed.

The theater has been run a good deal by toughs and hoodlums of late and it is time that some decisive step was taken.

The public will back Foote up in his work and if he wants help in pitching out the disturbers he can get it.

Tonight the company will present a triple bill—The Old Guard, A Happy Pair, (a comedy), and Mr. Foote will recite Edgar Poe's great poem, "The Bells."

Thursday night Othello will be presented.

No Time for Greeting.

Yesterday morning a man walked into the Sargeant-at-Arms' room, and advancing to Harry Flannery, said:

"Do you know me?"

"Can't say I do."

"I'm your brother from Philadel- phia, and I haven't seen you in six- teen years."

"The devil! Well, don't stop here to fall on my neck; get in there, quick, and help lobby against that anti-Well bill; then come back and embrace me."

The Philadelphia Flannery lit into the fray, and the bill was knocked out. Then he came back and fell— first on his brother's neck and then on his whisky and gum.

A Nevada Favorite.

Yesterday cards of the Russ House of San Francisco were on each mem- bers desk.

The Russ House is under the man- agement of Captain J. S. Young who is an old resident of Virginia City and favorably known to every man in Nevada.

He has materially improved the Russ House and now more people go there than to the Palace. They al- ways get a warm welcome and a front sunny room. Any man who registers from Nevada gets the best, the Hon. Billy Daugherty, ex-Deputy State Controller, is clerk.

The Shooting of J. Colburn.

J. Colburn, who was shot at his ranch near Pioche, is not expected to live.

It appears that a man named Leavett owed him $40, and he tried to make him sign a promissory note for the amount. He drew a pistol to enforce his demands, and fired two shots to frighten Leavitt, who re- turned the fire. Realizing that he was dying he made a statement ex- onerating Leavitt from all blame.

Query.

ED. APPEAL:—Are the grounds around the Capitol Square public, or do they belong to the State officers? If not why are they locked. They should be opened, and some member of this Legislature should introduce a bill to place iron benches around the building for the benefit of the visiting public.
